"What is Friendship but a name, A charm that lulls to sleep, A shade that follows wealth and famo; But leaves the wretch to weep."

Who is this that pours oil and wine into the bleeding wounds of an honorable name? smitten down by the stroke that felled his friend-is bound in his bonds and captive in his sad captivity?

Whose heart is this that yearns over a A MOTTLED CROW.—For some weeks back, a crow, with white wings, has been frequent-local upon a gentle and confining heart, and crushing the hopes and fortunes of fri nd, husband, wife and children? What Godlike man is this that is desolated at this desolated at this desolated at the state of tion? Who? Who is this that is sublimated and sanctified with the spirit of him who, in proportion to his separateness from who, in proportion to his separateless from sinners, pitted and wept over them—took upon him their intolerable burden and made it his own: crying "Oh that my head were waters and mine eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night for the slain of the daughter of my people!—
Alms! alms! he exists not here.

"This bodyless creation, ---- Extacy Is very cunning in-----

Men are mistaken who look for such things now. They dream idly who expect a practical, arithmetical, intellectual race, as we (Heaven save the mark) boast to be, to do anything half so foolish, or to encourage even the shadow of any such sentiments, so dangerous to a prudent respectability, and so degrading to a buckram and stilted righteousness, but above all so utterly inconsist-ent with the mysterious perfection of a good banking account.

If men were to judge of Friendship here:

If men were to judge of Friendship here, as the Bey of Algiers once did of Wisdom, by the hirsute quality—length and strength of a man's heard, the captive has his friend—surely the captive has his friend; but no, no, the unhappy one is left by an exhausted and trimming pusilanimity to his own unsoothed and bitter reflections.

"Deserted at his utmost need By those his former bounty fed;"
In his cold cell alone he lies
Without a friend to hash his sighs "

Without a friend to hesh his sighs "
Oh, Damon and Pythias, what feels your Pythagorean philosophy made of you!
Oh, Paul, thou Apostle of the Gentiles, what a gaby you were to wish yourself accursed from Christ for your brethren's sake, your kinemen according to the flesh! Were you living in our times "you bet" we should teach you "a circumstance" or two. You should then lean the advantage of nossess. should then learn the advantage of possess-ing that high and mailcious prety which strips a man of his reputation at the dinner table, or it may be at an evangelical tea and tract party, and then sings psalms, prays for his conversion, and sighs to clothe him in his conversion, and signs to crosse that in the garments of righteousness.

You stupids, "we would show you that there is a holiness in the lurceny of a man's good name which you weakly thought to be a worse offence than stealing his gold, that, a worse offence than stealing his gold, that, moreover, it is a fashionable, and therefore a praiseworthy act to hear but one side of the question, particularly when it only touches a man's truth and honor! merely that! and affords you a fresh opportunity of prayer and supplication.

Come again, oh Astræa, pure from thy Come again, oh Astrom, pure from thy pale sisterhood above; renew thy reign on earth once more; tear off the mask which now hides the loathsome deformity of the hypocrites who talk to men about fame and honor, while with impartial and secret treachery they are robbing them of both.

Let all the Actsons who infest the highways of integrity to hunt down the unwary, while gazing with a new surprise at the acts of the secret of the control of the contr naked majesty of truth, be transformed back again into beasts and be devoured by their own dogs.

Friendship, come forth again, and with thy dewy fingers press the throbbing and and burning temples of your fevered brother.
Come, sit down by the side of his unmade bed—talk to him — "allure to brighter worlds and lead the way."

Presonal Friend—I say, Jones, how is it that your wife dresses so magnificently, and you always appear out at the elbow?

Jones—You see, Thompson, my wife dresses according to the Gazette of Fushion, and I dress according to my ledger.

(17" If there is anybody under the canister of eaven that I havy in utter excressence, " said Mrs. artington, "It is the standerer, going about like box constructor, circulating his calomel among arest folia."

Political. Curiosity has been puzzled ever since the Council resolutions embodying a vote of want of confidence in the Executive were published, to know how such a schism in the ranks of the faithful could have occurred. The Council doors being sealed against public intrusion, of course the sayings and doings of that august body were as much a secret as "the work" in an encampment of Knight Templars. The resolutions, however, indicate the ground-work of the schism. The tax on real estate was deemed too heavy to be spent on steamboats-floating coffins. Only touch a man's pocket, if you want to sound the depth of his patriotism, religion, or philanthropy. If he cannot be convinced any other way, the prospective or actual occurrence of a drain on his exchequer is almost sure to bring about a change in his princisure to bring about a change in his principles. But few men possess the virtue of CURTIS & MOORE, the fabulous Roman who jumped headlong into the chasm to save Rome from destruction. But we find in the Council that there was enough loyalty to Cary & Co. to save their financial policy this season, if doomed the next, though there was not enough to save the Executive from censure. The wonder is how the latter could have been done-how a hamily could be read to the Assembly the like of which had not been heard before-how a Legislative Council, in which there were two members body and breeches belonging to the Government, could pass such resolutions when those two were opposed by only two others. The mystery is all very easily cleared up. Mr. Finlayson and Mr. Fraser were in favor of the resolutions. Mr. Cameron and Mr. Alston (the latter of course) were against them. The two latter being dependent on their offices for a living-and for their positions in the Council- on the principle of no vote no office-naturally enough stood up and fought tooth and nail against resolutions that censured their patrons. Loaves and fishes-patronage-is a great institution in a government. What energy it gave-what fire it must have added to the eloquence of the opponents of the resolutions. But it was all without avail. As luck had it, when Gov. Douglas sometime ago was interdicted from presiding over the Council, the Hon. Mr. Finlayson, as senior member, became President. So when the refractory resolutions came up, one would have naturally supposed that the "law lords" Royal Mail Steam Packet Compayn's would have had it all their own way-and defeated the resolution by a majority of one. Fortunately the Council possesses a remarkable parliamentary rule, unknown elsewhere than in this Colony, since the first Assembly was dissolved. This rule allows every Councillor, whether in the chair or tallment on board the Royal Mail Steamers, together not, to cast one vote, and if there be a tie the land and Aspinwall direct being so much President gives the casting vote. In this Shorter than by any other Route, way then the resolutions were carried. Cameron and Alston against; Fraser and Finlayson for the resolution. Here was a tie; so Mr. Finlayson, as President, gave the casting vote. Thus the public have the secret of how those bombshell resolutions were passed. Bu,t wonderful to relate, that was no sooner done than the vote was made unanimous. What amiable members the Government has in the Council! What a happy family the Assembly would present were this rule observed! What progress BY EXPRESS TO AND FROM ASPINWALL there would be made! We withdraw our there would be made: We windraw our opinion of the newly fledged "lord," as we presume the Government must feel very amiable over a censurable appointment to carry a measure, when they find their appointee backs up the Government till deleated and then goes over to the opposition without reservation.

Y The sorrow of life elevates and refines our perceptions. We look back with temperate pity upon the unsubstantial dreams of boyhood, and cherish, as more truly desirable than its "vain, deluding joys," our passionate farewells, our communion with the dead, our wider but sadder horizon.

To test the fact whether kerosene will explode or not, pour a small quantity into a saucer or a vessel of some kind, light a match and apply it. If it is explosive it will flash like powder; if it is pure it will

[From the London Daily News.] Strike of English Cotton Workers.

It seems almost incredible that any cotton spinners in Lancashire can be meditating a strike against the reduction of wages ren-dered necessary by the state and prospects of our cotton supply. It is too true that in the neighborhood of Bury, some of the operatives have actually struck against the reduction of 10 per cent. proposed by the masters; and at Preston there is a threat of turning against a reduction of 14 per cent. Such a course, adopted under the circumstances of the time, seems to show that even yet, after the great advance the Lancashire operatives have made in knowledge and in yet, after the great attended the Assessing operatives have made in knowledge and in insight into their own interests, there is still much misunderstanding among them of the sources of wages and the causes of the rise and fall of the payment of labor. The Bury men on strike are reported to have declared that they will consent to a reduction equal to the advance made 1859—that is, 5 per cent.; but they have struck against more. The Preston men refuse all reduction.

Where do they suppose their wages came from. They are, for the most part, newspaper readers; they must have seen by the journals of their country that employers are failing in larger numbers than were ever known before. The Manchester Examiner says that 79 firms in the district of the known before. The Manchester Examiner says that 79 firms in the district of the manufacture have failed since the 1st of January. There have been fifteen failures at Manchester, and the same number at Burnley and Bury, and no less than thirty at Bolton, Blackburn and Clitheroe. When at Bolton, Blackburn and Clitheroe. When manufacturers of small capital and precarious standing fail in numbers in this way, the larger and safer capitalists are under a great strain. They can only stand losses for a longer time than weaker firms. Not only does their business, yield them an work put they have to may waves out of no profit but they have to pay wages out of their capital. Of course, this can only be a temporary state of affairs. It is a question of time. Unless trade improves, the day must come when the concern must stop, either by the employer's failure, or by his retiring from business before his property is all gone. It is very clear that it depends partly on the operatives how long th s pay-
